THE ROCHESTER CLUB was organized in 1860 as a Social Club. Its first home was in the old Ellwanger & Barry Building, on State Street, on the site of what is now the present Ellwanger & Barry Building. The Club later moved from this site to the top floor of the Rochester Savings Bank Building, on West Main Street, and there, for many years, it was a thriving organization. In August, 1888, the Club acquired the Wilder residence, on East Avenue, and moved into it at a time when its membership was very small, consisting of some seventy-two members, and when its financial affairs were in a very precarious condition. The Club at this time had to face some very active competition from another club, and its fortunes rose and fell until the year 1902, at which time they were at its lowest ebb. At this time William Bausch was elected to the Presidency and George F. Roth to the Vice-Presidency, and under the leadership of Mr. Bausch, ably supported by Mr. Roth and a very loyal Board of Governors, the affairs of the Club began slowly to improve. The membership was built up, the building on several occasions remodeled and enlarged, so that January 1st, 1930, found the Club housed in a beautiful, comfortable and spacious home with a membership of 847 resident members, 117 non-resident members, 12 junior resident members and 5 honorary members.

On a subsequent page appears the names of the past Presidents of the Club, many of whom will be recognized as men written into the history of Rochester.

Associated with these men on the Directorate of the Club at different times were men prominent in the political, financial, social and mercantile life of the City, such as
